

Start a conversation with a random person that you bump into.

Interview them: ask questions and opinions. You have a limited time of 15 minutes.

On the small strip of paper below, write the person's story as a sentence or a word—anything that describes who they are or what they've gone through. Cut out.

Next, cut out the circle below, and place the strip of paper inside.

Fold the circle and staple it to close it as in the illustration below. Now you have a story cookie.

Place the story cookie anywhere at eye level—it could be on a door, car, or in a coffee place—so someone else may read the cookie.
